A Mistake.

It happened in a rough mining town in Colorado. There was a grand ball at the ranch of Whisky Jack, a well-known character in the "diggings," and the "elite" of the district responded to the call in full force. The party was held in a rickety old barn belonging to the host, and what with a few red strips of flannel, a grotesque accumulation of mountain roses and a row of dripping candles, the appointments of the place were perfect. My first partner in the giddy dance was the wife of the man who killed the village Postmaster because he refused him a letter; she was fat, fair and forty, and danced with the grace of a cow. My next partner was the daughter of this charming pair, a young girl just bursting into the loveliness of womanhood; she was badly freckled and sported a wart on her nose. My next partner was a blooming grass-widow, a fresh arrival; and then I rested. I began to comment on new faces in the room. My companion in this pleasant pastime was a heavy-bearded miner, uncouth, roughly dressed, tobacco slobbered and very profane. This was our first meeting, and I hoped it would be the last.

"There goes a hard-looking case," I whispered, as the wife of the man who killed the Postmaster sailed by. "She's a bad 'un."

"Yas," replied the man, "I'd hate to have the critter step on me. What an elegant target she would make for a poor marksman!"

"Yes," I said, and turned my eyes on a tall, raw-boned creature sailing toward us, supported by a little man with sandy whiskers and red-top boots. "Here comes the boss."

"How?"

"The boss, I say; ain't she a lovely chimpanzee?"

"A what?"

"Chimpanzee!"

He glared at me a moment and then reached for his revolver.

"What is a chimpanzee?" he growled fiercely, his red eyes growing large.

I saw that I had made some mistake and hastened to explain.

"Why—why," I stammered, backing off, "a chimpanzee is a lovely creature found in Africa—nothing so gorgeously beautiful as a chimpanzee. That is the highest compliment a lady can receive."

"O!" and the man looked relieved. "Yas, I think so myself, stranger; she is a lovely chimpanzee; she's my wife."

Reining a Horse.

One of the most senseless, and yet a very common habit of the American people, is the reining of driving horses so tight as to inflict upon them a great deal of pain, under the mistaken idea that it adds to the stylish appearance of the animal. When people see a horse's head drawn up by the bearing rein, and see him stepping short and champing the bit, tossing his head and rattling the harness, they assume that he is acting in the pride of his strength and fullness of spirit, whereas the animal is really suffering agonies of pain, and is trying to gain by these movements momentary relief. To our view, a horse looks better, and we know he feels better, when pursuing a natural, leisurely, swinging gait. It is as necessary for his head to oscillate in response to the motions of his body as it is for a man's hands to do the same thing. A horse allowed his head will work easier and last longer than one on which a check is used.

Blinds are another popular absurdity in the use of horses. They collect dust, pound the eye and are in every way a nuisance. A horse that cannot be driven with safety without them should be sold to a railroad grader. No colt should be broken to them.—Lincoln (Neb) Journal.

The Science of Kissing.

Science in the last few years has gained a terrible footing in the world. It has rattled the dry bones of foggyism, made pi out of worn-out theories, and upset ideas which have been established for centuries.

The latest and most astonishing fact that has been developed is that there is a scientific mode of kissing. The day when a young man can grab a girl about the neck and gobble a kiss, in a rough but comfortable manner, is past. The time when he could circle her waist with one arm, get his shirt bosom full of hair oil, and piroquet his lips over every square inch of her countenance, is no more. Science has proclaimed against it, and man shudders but remains silent.

The old style of kissing, which sounds like tearing a clap-board off a smoke-house, is now considered bad taste, and, consequently, going out of fashion, although the majority of girls admit that science has destroyed all the comforts of a long, lingering, heart-thrilling kiss, and this fact causes them to express no little regret.

The improved scientific method of kissing is to throw the right arm languidly around the fair one's shoulders, tilt her chin up until her face is pointed at an angle of seventy degrees—or until it has an aspect resembling the bowsprit of a clipper-built sloop. Then stoop softly and graze about her lips, in a quiet, sudden sort of a way, tickle her nose with your mustache until she cries "Ouch!" This is scientific kissing; but there is no consolation in it—nothing to make a man feel as if a couple of galvanic batteries were galloping along his spinal column. It is flat, lukewarm; it lacks substance, and, if not stale, it is at least unprofitable.—New Orleans Times.

Fighting Trifles—Three Short Stories.

What a world of trouble, time, and nerve irritation would be saved if boys, and men too, would never mind trifling annoyances. Only the other day we overheard one boy telling another what a third boy had said about him, and urging him to "lick him." "Oh," said the second boy, "'tisn't worth minding. He knows it ain't so, and I won't stoop to his level by taking any notice of it." We inwardly thought, "that's a very wise head on young shoulders."

It reminded us of two men, one of whom started on a foot journey of 150 miles or so. Two days later the other man started on the same road, and on the fourth day overtook the first one. The latter remarked:

"This is the worst and slowest road I ever traveled. There is the greatest lot of snarling, barking little dogs I ever saw, and it has taken half my time to drive them off."

"Why," said the second man, "I didn't pay any attention to them, but came right along as if they weren't there." Half the time of many boys and men is wasted in fighting trifles.

A veteran Circuit Judge was always sure of meeting some cutting or sneering remarks from a self-conceited lawyer when he came to a certain town in his rounds. This was repeated one day at dinner, when a gentleman present said: "Judge, why don't you squelch that fellow?"

The Judge dropped his knife and fork, and placing his chin upon his hands, and his elbows upon the table, remarked:

"Up in our town a widow woman has a yallur dog that, whenever the moon shines, goes out upon the stoop and barks, and barks away at it all night." Stopping short, he quietly resumed eating. After waiting some time, it was asked: "Well, Judge, what of the dog and the moon?" "Oh, the moon kept right on," he said.—American Agriculturist.

THE Catlettsburg correspondent of the Ashland Independent says:

The members of the State Guard, who are temporarily at this place guarding the murderers, are justly indignant on account of the unkind and uncalculated allusions regarding them, made by a neighboring newspaper. The young gentlemen composing the battalion are high spirited, full of life and fun, and from my observation I can truthfully assert that it would be hard indeed to find an equal number of young men more circumspect in their behavior. They are uniformly kind and courteous in their intercourse with our citizens and strangers attending court. I have not had the curiosity and impertinence to inquire into the personal history and private character of these young soldiers, but I am satisfied they are as good as the average young men of any community in or out of the State. They have made many warm friends in this city, who will regret their departure.

Dr. Frazier's Root Bitters.

Frazier's Root Bitters are not a dram-shop whisky beverage, but are strictly medicinal in every sense. They act strongly upon the liver and kidneys, keep the bowels open and regular, make the weak strong, heal the lungs, build up the nerves and cleanse the blood and system of every impurity.

For dizziness, rush of blood to the head, tending to apoplexy, dyspepsia, fever and ague, dropsy, pimples and blotches, scrofulous humors and sores, tetter, ring worm, white swelling, erysipelas, sore eyes and for young men suffering from weakness or debility caused from imprudence, and to females in delicate health, Frazier's Root Bitters are especially recommended.

Dr. Frazier: I have used two bottles of your Root Bitters for dyspepsia, dizziness, weakness and kidney disease, and they did me more good than the doctors and all the medicine I ever used. From the first dose I took I began to mend, and I am now in perfect health, and feel as well as I ever did. I consider your medicine one of the greatest blessings.

MR. HENRY WEDDING, an experienced tailor in East Maysville, has an advertisement in our issue to-day. We take pleasure in cordially recommending him to the readers of the BULLETIN.

THE Eastern Kentucky News is the name of a new paper soon to be published at Grayson, Ky., by Messrs. J. M. Robb & Co., experienced newspaper writers. We place it upon our exchange list with pleasure and extend our best wishes for its success.

THE cost of sending the troops to Catlettsburg and keeping them there during the murder trials foots up about $14,000. The court expenses, which includes witnesses, jurors and transporting the prisoners to places of safe-keeping will amount to about $4,000 more.

THE DAILY BULLETIN, we are very gratified to say, is succeeding beyond our expectations. Our subscription list is growing larger every day, and the business community is fast appreciating its value as an advertising medium. We hope to improve it in interest to the public.

THE meeting at the M. E. Church, South, still continues with interest. Dr. Young, of Harrodsburg, is assisting the pastor, Rev. M. D. Reynolds. There will be services this evening at 7 1/2 o'clock, and tomorrow at 11 a. m., and also at 7 1/2 p. m., The congregations are large and the services are very interesting. From the interest manifested it seems probable the meeting will continue during next week.

A REPORT is current in Maysville that Ensign's Comedy Company, who will present "Rooms For Rent," at the opera house next Monday evening, is 'the same troupe that appeared in "Rooms to Let," at Catlettsburg and other up-river towns recently. This is not true. "Rooms For Rent" is an entirely different play and is presented by an entirely different company. They have not yet appeared in the towns named but will go in that direction after their performance in this city. It is one of the best organizations traveling, and will give a refined and elegant entertainment.

Humpty Dumpty.

We again remind the readers of the BULLETIN of the appearance in this city this evening, at the opera house, of Nick Roberts' famous Humpty Dumpty troupe. It will give one of the most thoroughly enjoyable entertainments ever presented in this city and if you wish to enjoy an evening of unalloyed pleasure, you will not fail to attend.

The Augusta (Ga.) Constitutional says: Owing to the exceedingly inclement weather there was a small audience at the opera house last evening, but Nick Roberts' company played as well as if the house had been crowded. The favorite pantomime was presented under an altogether different guise from the old versions, and the new is decidedly an improvement on the old. Everything is fresh, lively and interesting. There are three clowns, and all good ones. The situations and incidents are novel and laughable. The specialty of performances are excellent and include the French locomotive by the Orifri Brothers, feats of balancing, rifle song and dance and double skipping rope dance by Miss Belle Clifton and Miss Louise DeLuca. Miss Tillie Van Buren, with a spirited xylophone solo, double horizontal bar by Dick Reno, Frank Clifton and Harry Wambold the Royal Staircase Band, the Orifri Brothers in their musical specialty, &c. The company is well worth seeing. They give a matinee this afternoon and another performance this evening.

THE Ashland Independent says: A new post-office has been established at Denton, Carter county, which is called Heflin, in honor of the popular U. S. Deputy Marshal, James Heflin. Frank Hord has been appointed postmaster, which is an excellent selection. Denton, or Heflin, is an enterprising, growing town, and has a right to put on city airs.

THE steamer Emma Graham on her arrival here yesterday afternoon, brought the information that a small covered boat would arrive at this place some time during the evening, having on board two persons sick with small pox. The boat came as expected, and landed at the foot of Lower street; subsequently it dropped down below Adams' distillery. Dr. H. K. Adamson, who had heard the report, visited the boat and examining every person on board, found it to be without the slightest foundation in fact.

The Improvement in Human Health.

In result of a somewhat large acquaintance with the facts held to indicate the state and progress of "human health," I fear my testimony must be given to show that the improvement effected by science consists in a prolongation of the passive endurance of life, rather than an extension of the period of true vitality, or any increase of the opportunity for good work and real intellectual enjoyment. We may "live" longer, but our lives are not either happier nor more useful for the excessive energy recently devoted to the conservation of health, or the inordinate and laborious means taken to avoid disease and death. It may, doubtless, be possible to raise humanity to the level of one of those scientific toys which approximate perpetual motion, but expend their whole force in moving themselves. Whether longevity purchased at the price of passing a lifetime in running away from death would be worth having, I must leave to be determined by the judgment of those who set a value on our so-called sanitary progress, which I, for one, fail to recognize.

I think men were happier and better, and lived nobler lives, before the pursuit of health and the yearning for longevity became a craze, almost amounting to madness. What to eat, drink and many circumstances, beside the nature of food, which exert an influence on the process of digestion. First and foremost among these is the quantity of food taken; for the efficient performance of healthy digestion the stomach should of fairly filled, but not distended. Dr. Beaumont's experiments showed that a certain bulk was necessary for the performance of healthy digestion. This fact has long been known by practical experience to uncivilized nations. Thus the Kamshatdales are in the habit of mixing earth or sawdust with the train oil on which alone they are frequently reduced to live, and the Veddahs, or wild hunters of Ceylon, on the same principle mingle the pounded fiber of soft and decayed wood with the honey on which they feed when meat is not procurable. The time which has elapsed since the last meal was taken should, for the effectual performance of digestion, be sufficient to insure the stomach being quite clear of food. The amount of exercise taken previous and subsequent to the meal is not without its influence; gentle exercise being favorable and over-exertion injurious to digestion. Then there is the state of mind, tranquillity of temper being apparently essential to quick and easy digestion. In addition may be mentioned the state of bodily health and the state of the weather.

Esquimaux Dogs.

Some interesting details concerning the habits of Esquimaux dogs are given by Dr. Bessel. The instant halt is called by the driver the dogs throw themselves to the ground with their snouts between their fore paws; they rise again to stretch, and then lie down again at once. Two Newfoundland dogs, which belong to the Polaris pack, gradually assumed similar habits, but before lying down they always turned round and round in their resting-place, like all dogs, except the Esquimaux breed, for the author never saw an Esquimaux dog do this. Mr. Darwin, as will be remembered, has explained this habit of running round before lying down, invariably to be observed in other domestic dogs, as a survival of the instinct of the wild ancestor, which leads him to form a bed in the grass by this means. Every one has heard of the extraordinary voracity of the Esquimaux dogs; they will even sometimes snap off a piece of their master's flesh if carelessly exposed. One day on board the Polaris, the porcelain door-handle of one of the cabins fell off, with the usual square rod of iron attached to it. Five or six of the dogs made a rush at it, there was a momentary struggle, the dogs were hastily driven away, and the door-knob was already swallowed. The dog that ate it was none the worse, nor the handle either, in the end. An Esquimaux told the author that the following were the points to be noticed in selecting a good dog: A broad breast, short ears, strong legs, large feet, low loins, and a moderately long tail. The tail must not bend too near its root, as this shows the loins to be weak.—Nature.

BATCHELDER'S Ventilated Egg Case.

Patented February 15, 1881.

Indispensable to Merchants Shippers
And Producers.

The outside frame of this carrier contains five trays, held in place by fasteners at end of case, as seen in cut. These Trays are constructed in reversible halves. The above cut shows one whole tray filled ready to be placed in case, each egg resting in its cardboard socket in such a manner as to be readily counted, candled, or transferred from tray to tray, or case to case, without rehandling.
For cold storage this case will store 60 dozen with racks made to receive the half trays, hence this is the cheapest storage case manufactured, saving largely in space.
The manner of holding the eggs on end prevents oscillation, adding, or breakage, and adds greatly to their freshness when carried long in storage. Size of 30 dozen No. 1 cases 25x12x14, weighs 20 pounds.

PRICES IN CHICAGO.

Shipper's No. 1, 30 doz. Case with Fillers complete 65 Cents.
